Maples Teesdale Announces New Managing Partner

Leading real estate specialist, Maples Teesdale are pleased to announce that Chris Wilkinson has been elected as Managing Partner with effect from 1 April.

Former Managing Partner Mark Bryan, who has been at Maples Teesdale since 1996 and has held the top job since 2004, will remain with the firm.

During Mark's term the firm has reorganised itself structurally and focused on commercial property, construction, corporate real estate, planning, property finance and property litigation after moving away from private client work in 2002. Since then Maples Teesdale has confirmed its position as the UK's leading commercial property law specialist.

Chris Wilkinson has considerable experience in all areas of commercial real estate and is looking forward to consolidating the progress which has been made by the firm and creating opportunities for future growth.

Commenting on his appointment, Chris said; "I am delighted and honoured to have been chosen by my fellow partners to serve as Managing Partner of Maples Teesdale at what is a very exciting time in the development of the firm. The current economic environment continues to present our clients with opportunities and challenges on which Maples Teesdale is ideally placed to advise. I look forward to working with my partners, the whole team at Maples Teesdale and our clients to achieve continued success for our clients and for the firm."
